Gentlemen:--

I have a medal of bronze which I believe is one that was struck for the Municipal Committee of Welcome in New York to Admiral Dewey, after the Spanish-American War. It is a round coin with Admiral Dewey's portrait on one side, and this coin hung from a bar resembling a cannon, the two joined by a ribbon. I have not the ribbon as the medal was taken apart, but I have the two pieces. Will you kindly advise me whether the same has any value and also whether you would care to purchase it.

Yours very truly,

Grace McGrann

Dear Madam:

Your favour concerning a Dewey medal at hand. As far as we know, none of the Dewey medals have any special value. Yours may be worth anywhere from 25 cents to One Dollar.

If you care to bring it up here some time, we can tell you more about it.

Very truly yours,

Curator
